

Peace---I found this puzzle interesting. Why no trade on this day?

The process of “not trading” on this particular day helps us understand what to look for in a trade. The Higher time frame (4 hour) had a sellers FVG.

There are indicators that can print “Fair Value Gaps”. Therefore, waiting for a sweep into a previous level of “equal highs” (London and Asia equal highs) and bearish order flow (FVG’s) on the 1 minute chart away from the level. This is the “Manipulation” swing. We take notice of bullish FVG’s that are against our bias, and be patient. Its always about levels. Price will usually reach a level, then we look for a “sweep of liquidity” taking stop losses at that level, then a reversal proven with order flow (FVG’s). Here are some pictures of the process of how this day was not a trade opportunity. The process is the key with “probabilistic thinking”, and trusting that a “series of trades” will be successful, not just one trade. Peace
